

Information Technology Exchange (ITE) is a 501(C)3 Nonprofit corporation that was founded in 2002 for the purpose of increasing technology access and literacy. The most recent term for this work is called 'Digital Inclusion'. To date this effort has received more than 7 million pounds of retired corporate tech and electronics, diverted more than 1.7 million pounds of that material to reuse in support of thousands of disadvantaged individuals, families and other nonprofits throughout New England.

In 2019, ITE combined eWaste Alternatives – a nonprofit environmental effort that employs people with disabilities and technology learners in electronics recycling, and PCs for MAINE – the Digital Inclusion effort described above, into a single comprehensive operation named 'give IT. get IT.' Both missions are now integrated into a single, efficient, certified operation that recycles and reuses technology for digital inclusion.

Our leadership team is responsible for stewardship of the mission, resources and operations of the organization. Hundreds of volunteers and community advocates help the organization connect with corporations who want to turn their retired tech into tools for people as well as connecting individuals throughout the community with our tech access services.
